Preface

Gotham, long recognized as a fallen industrial city, is facing deep-rooted challenges.

Widespread concerns about crime and corruption, coupled with insufficient federal interventions, have deepened the city's long-standing image of darkness. People have grown to accept this dismal state, as revitalization seems unlikely without bold new initiatives. The city's underworld, however, has been effectively curbed, with criminal activities kept at a manageable level thanks to Batman.

With faint glimmers of hope coming, Gotham now needs a visionary scheme to unleash its creative potential and restore its former glory in the 21st century.

SCHEME HIGHLIGHTS

City Image Reshaping:
A Vibrant City of Hope

Gotham: Glow & Grow reimagines Gotham City as a hub of creativity with hope through a comprehensive scheme.

It innovatively uses the European Commission's Cultural and Creative Cities Monitor model, focusing on cultural vibrancy, creative economy, and enabling environment factors to reshape the city image, transform urban spaces, and increase global connections.

This creative city scheme stands out with its comprehensive approach from both the city and citizen perspectives, integrating the renaissance of creative culture and the rejuvenation of the creative economy through multifaceted initiatives. This strategic scheme will make Gotham a more vibrant, creative-sustainable, and globally connected city with hope and trust.

SITUATION ANALYSIS

PUBLIC IMPRESSION

Our agency conducted an online ethnography (see Appendix) to assess Gotham's international and interstellar impression. This research identified Gotham's current issues regarding cultural and creative aspects, allowing our creative city proposal to be more targeted.

Online ethnography insights

Crime and evil

Gotham is widely viewed as New York by night—a city plagued by crime and evil activities, which contributes to its dark and dangerous reputation.

Government neglect and federal indifference

There is a prevalent sense of neglect from the federal government, leading to Gotham's isolation and exacerbating its problems.

Socio-economic disparities

Significant socio-economic disparities within Gotham highlight the need for more inclusive community spaces.

Comparison to other cities

Gotham is often unfavorably compared to other cities, underscoring the need to create a unique, positive identity for the city.

Interstellar review

"I'm not particularly fond of Gotham. It's like someone built a nightmare out of metal and stone."

Clark Kent, Superman
Citizen of Krypton Planet,
Andromeda Galaxy
(Green & Johnson, 2008)

GOTHAM'S CREATIVE LANDSCAPE

Building upon the public impression, this creative city proposal utilizes the Cultural and Creative Cities Monitor (CCCM) model by the European Commission (n.d.) to analyze the current creative landscape of Gotham. This multidimensional analysis will provide the rationale for the strategic framework.

Cultural vibrancy

As a once-thriving industrial center in the United States, Gotham's early 20th-century economic development fostered a prosperous culture. Its booming industries and international trade laid the foundation for rich cultural expressions and historical significance. From graffiti-filled streets to opera performances on Grand Avenue, and from expressionist architecture to neon lights at Gotham Square, this port city was known for its vibrant cultural life (Surface, 2022; Fitch, 2017; Batman Fandom, n.d.).

However, due to industrial restructuring and rising crime rates, Gotham's economy has declined over the past few decades with limited federal support. According to Cultural Economy theory, this economic downturn has led to the fragmentation of Gotham's once-diverse culture (Du Gay & Pryke, 2002).

To rejuvenate its cultural vibrancy and community engagement, Gotham must adapt to contemporary trends and improve its dark and chaotic image (Surface, 2022). Its diverse population and rich cultural heritage offer unique opportunities for innovative cultural projects. By creating dynamic cultural experiences for residents and visitors, Gotham can regain its cultural vibrancy and reshape its city image.

Creative economy

The creative economy in Gotham is vital to the city's development. Cultural producers depend on social venues, like nightlife spots and galleries, to advance their careers. The growth of this economy relies on physical spaces where those creative professionals can gather and innovate (Currid, 2007).

However, areas like Gotham Square, Wayne Tower, and the Financial District are dominated by commercial activities, and the Fashion District, controlled by the Penguin, is a high-end fashion center rarely visited by the public (Batman Fandom, n.d.; DC Extended Universe, n.d.). Consequently, Gotham lacks creative districts and public spaces for social interactions among creatives, hindering the exchange of ideas necessary for the development of the creative economy of Gotham.

Bench-mark

The CCCM model is designed for regional and municipal policy makers to identify a city's strengths and opportunities.

Cultural legacy

Gotham's cultural prosperity brought by the past industrial booms has been buried by economic decline.

Nowhere to go

The lack of creative public spaces make it difficult for creatives to meet outside of work.

Enabling environment

An enabling environment is essential for the successful implementation of cultural and creative initiatives. This includes fostering community trust and building strong international connections.

People trust

The consistency between the city spirit promoted by the government and the beliefs of the citizens fosters people trust. According to Social Capital Theory, shared values and goals enhance social trust and cultural cooperation (Putnam, 2000). Gothamites' reliance on Batman reflects a broader faith in heroes. The Gotham government can incorporate this belief in future schemes to align the city spirit with citizens' faiths. This approach will help Gothamites feel included, thereby activating their trust and creativity.

International connections

Gotham's reputation has suffered significantly due to high crime rates and a negative image, leading to isolation from the global community. Despite these challenges, Gotham possesses unique cultural assets and iconic symbols like Batman that can be leveraged to build bridges between cultures and improve international connections. Transforming the city's image is also key to strengthening international ties and enhancing its creativity (Anholt, 2007).

Public belief

Batman has Gothamites' trust. The government needs to leverage the influence of this vigilante.

SCHEME PLANNING

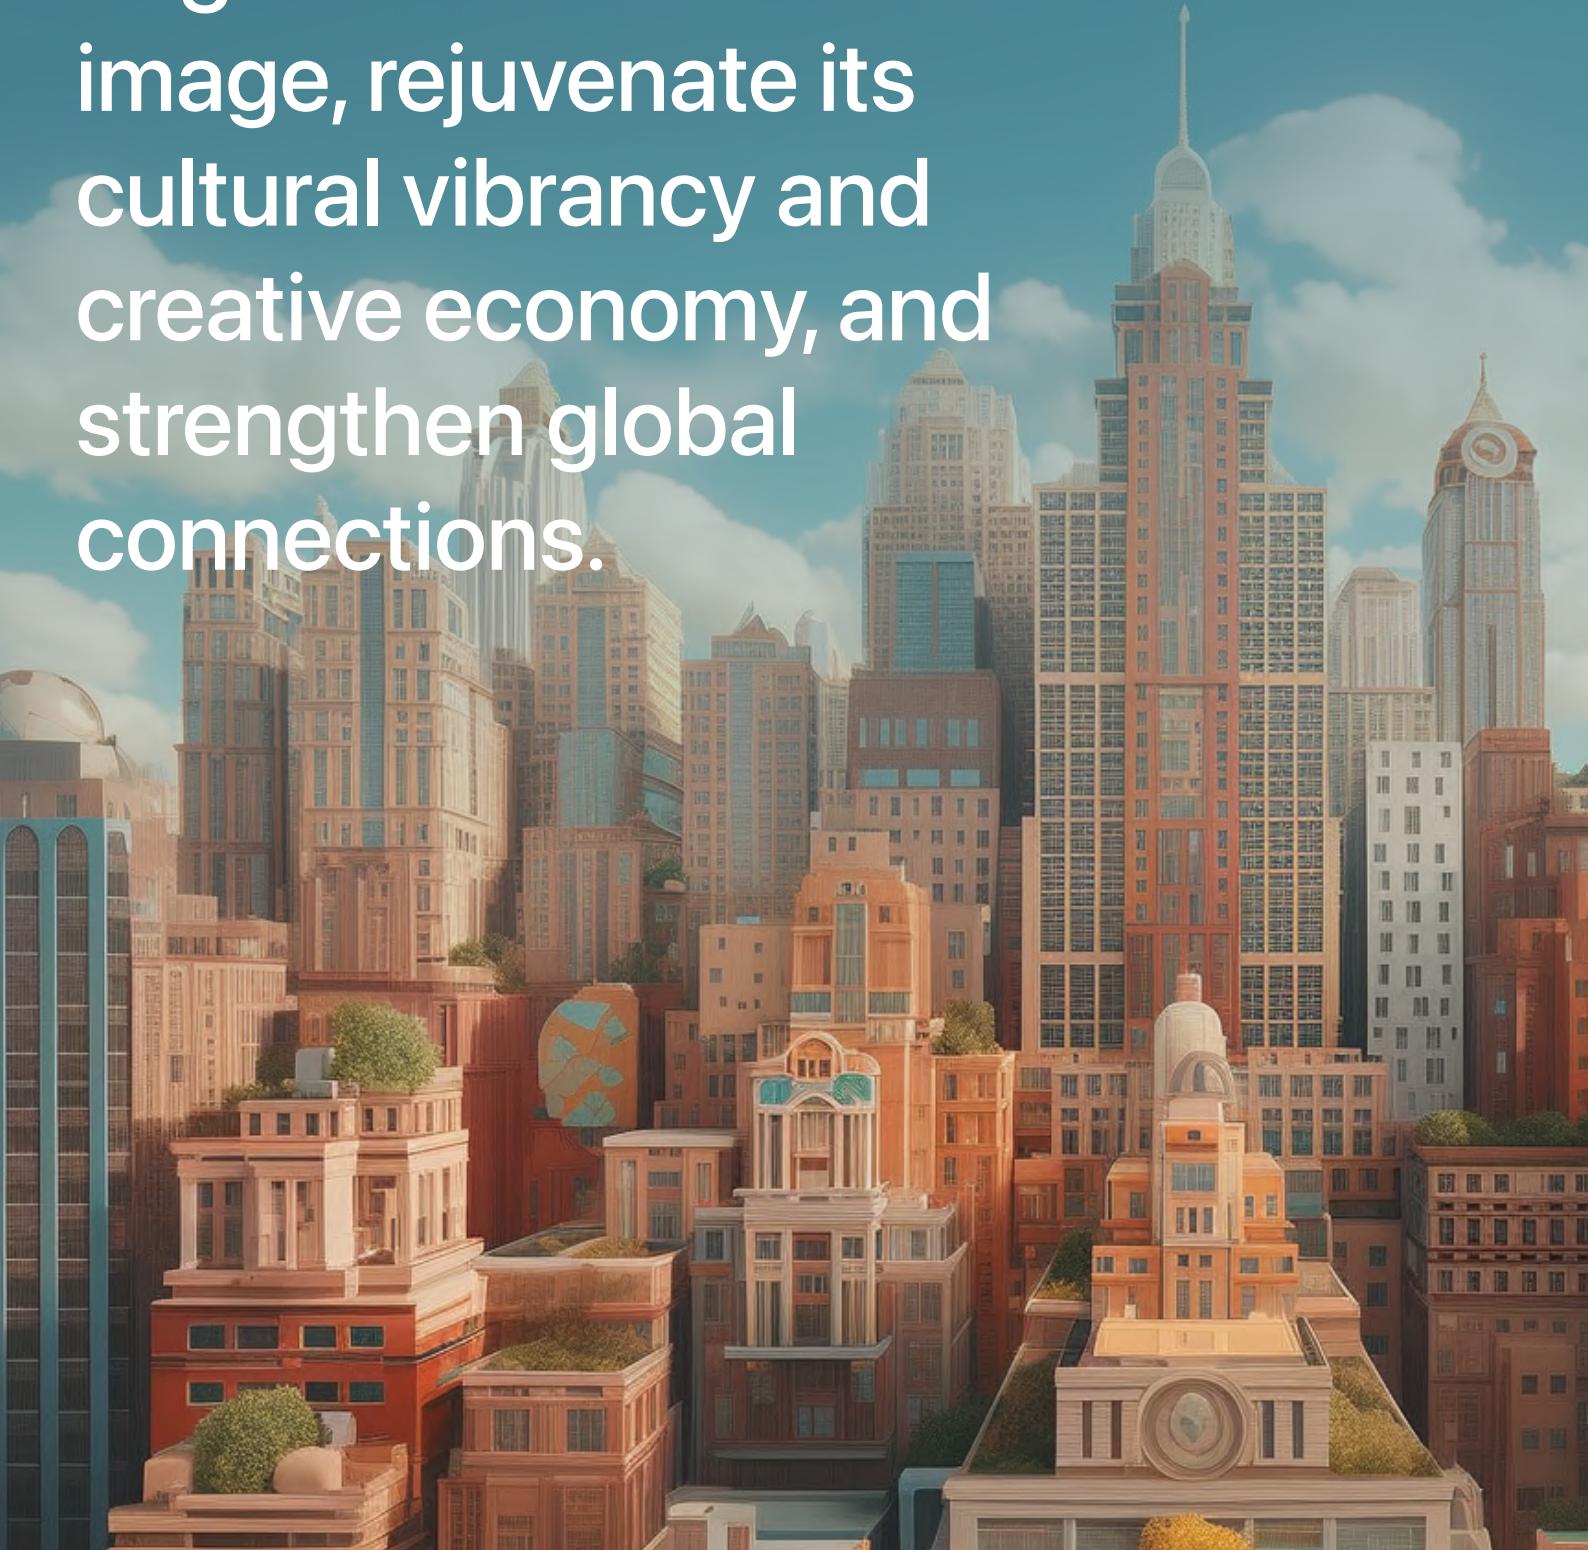

GOTHAM: GLOW & GROW

CREATIVE CITY SCHEME 2024

Scheme goal

To reshape Gotham's negative interstellar image, rejuvenate its cultural vibrancy and creative economy, and strengthen global connections.

STRATEGIC FRAMEWORK

By focusing on the insights generated from public impressions and the CCCM model, this scheme has a robust rationale for the following cultural and creative initiatives for Gotham City.

GLOW

ILLUMINATING GOTHAM'S RENAISSANCE

The Glow approach seeks to restore Gotham's cultural vibrancy and set a creative and hopeful tone for the city. This initiative aims to strengthen public trust and international connections, laying the foundation for the growth of the creative economy.

Flagship initiative / Gotham renaissance film

The Journey to Light

To reshape Gotham's image from dark to vibrant, our agency proposes starting with visual expression to illuminate Gotham's new identity.

As the grand opening of the scheme, Wes Anderson, renowned for his creative use of saturated color, will be invited to direct The Journey to Light, a Gotham renaissance film, as the flagship initiative of this scheme. Starring Batman and other iconic characters of Gotham, the film will tell a compelling story of Gotham's transformation, highlighting its cultural and creative rebirth.

Leveraging Anderson's fame and his signature visual style, the film will create a strong visual association with Gotham's new city image. Through the director's imaginative storytelling, the film aims to inspire a positive perception among the audience, fostering a dynamic and energetic image of the city in a new light.

Co-created fashion show Spotlighting Batman

In 2024, the year of Batman's 85th anniversary, DC is hosting pop-up events in New York City to distribute free comic books. As Batman's hometown, Gotham City will also collaborate with DC to launch special anniversary events.

Batman is a symbol of faith for Gothamites, with his iconic elements like the mask seen throughout the city's streets and alleys. These diverse representations of Batman reflect the collective beliefs of the citizens. Our agency proposes that the Gotham government capitalize on this popular sentiment by launching the Spotlighting Batman initiative, aiming to align the city spirit with the trust of Gothamites.

Every Batman is welcome. Gothamites are encouraged to freely design Batman suits according to their preferences, not limited to the traditional black color. Outstanding and popular designs will be showcased at a grand fashion show during the opening ceremony of the Batman 85th anniversary event, allowing the world to witness Gotham's creativity and cultural diversity with the recreated Batmen in the spotlight.

2024 is Batman's 85th anniversary.

Socio-economic revitalization initiative Luminous Bazaars

Nightlife, according to previous research, is an essential component of the creative economy.

The Luminous Bazaars initiative aims to establish night markets in various parts of Gotham, featuring local food, crafts, music, and performances, encouraging the nighttime economy and social activities. Themed events and festivals will be hosted to celebrate Gotham's diverse cultural background, attracting residents and tourists. More innovative ideas will be generated by the creatives gathered at the night bazaars.

Additionally, by setting up nighttime events in multiple areas of Gotham, the flowing crowds can help curb nighttime crime in previously sparsely populated areas, thereby increasing the public's sense of safety and trust in the government.

Interactive facilities

Beacon of Dawn

What are the tangible expressions of global connections and the city of hope? Our agency has the answer for Gotham.

A large screen will be installed in Gotham's Central Park to display real-time sunrises from around the world. This visual spectacle will be paired with live camera feeds from other cities, allowing Gotham residents to see and interact with people in different time zones who are also experiencing their sunrises. As night falls in Gotham, residents can greet Australians who are enjoying their breakfast in the morning sunlight via the screen.

This initiative will promote Gotham's cultural international connections among the general public, laying a foundation for its economic and political global ties. It will also bring a sense of unity and hope to Gothamites by sharing the beauty of dawn with the world—no matter what time and era it is in Gotham, people can always see the incoming light of the world at the provided facilities.

Live sunrise

Showcasing continuous, real-time sunrises from different time zones.

Interactive camera

Enabling live interactions between viewers in Gotham and other cities.

GROW

REJUVENATING GOTHAM'S LEGACY

The creative economy requires physical spaces for cultural producers to generate sparks of inspiration. The Grow approach will address deeper aspects by redeveloping Gotham's city spaces planned during its peak industrial era. It focuses on the concept of transforming sites to build connections for creative producers and further enhance the creative economy.

Space transformation initiative

Urban Reclaim

It's time to return the streets to Gotham citizens.

This post-industrial creative block transformation initiative will integrate elitist business centers and transform abandoned factories into more grounded and diverse community hubs for catering, socializing, and creating. Reclaiming certain urban areas will create a "street feeling" to dissolve the distance created by the suit-and-tie atmosphere of business centers and the past heavy industrial areas.

By transforming the streets in the financial district to be more accessible to the public and converting abandoned factories into creative blocks, Gotham will provide more public spaces for creative juices to flow, thereby activating the creative economy.

Community engagement formula

Spark Corridors

As an extension of the Urban Reclaim initiative, planning the construction of Spark Corridors can be seen as a method to enhance community engagement.

For creativity, it is important to expose producers to a wide range of rich creative inputs, much like the exchange of diverse knowledge and information that fueled the Renaissance in Florence (TEDx Talks, 2019). Gotham can adopt this methodology by designating certain streets and areas, beyond the abandoned factories and financial districts, as cultural corridors where local artists, musicians, and performers can showcase their work. These corridors could be pedestrian-friendly zones with street art, live music, food stalls, and pop-up markets, creating vibrant community spaces.

By integrating the Spark Corridors into Gotham's urban landscape, this initiative is expected to enhance the city's cultural and creative output and develop the creative economy.

VALUE & COLLAB

EXPECTED OUTCOMES

As a result of the Gotham: Glow & Grow initiative, the creation of new work will be a central outcome, driving both cultural vibrancy and economic growth.

The Glow approach focuses on enhancing cultural vibrancy by reshaping Gotham's image and strengthening its connections within the city and with the Earth (this scheme does not yet address Gotham's connections with other planets).

The Journey to Light, directed by Wes Anderson, is viewed as the flagship initiative for reshaping Gotham's image. It aims to establish a strong connection between Gotham and the concepts of light and vitality through its visual and narrative elements. Spotlighing Batman, the co-created fashion show, is expected not only to leverage Batman's global fame to showcase Gotham's creativity to the world but also to align the city's spirit with the beliefs of Gothamites, thereby enhancing social cohesion. Luminous Bazaars will be introduced to revitalize the socio-economic landscape and create more gathering opportunities for local creatives. The set of interactive facilities in the Beacon of Dawn initiative will bring light and hope to Gotham, showcasing the city's vibrant side to the world and bringing the world's dawn to Gotham. Through this approach, Gotham's dark image will be transformed into one of brightness, strengthening people's trust and global ties.

The Grow approach will further enhance this by redeveloping post-industrial sites into dynamic creative hubs. These transformed spaces will provide the necessary infrastructure for artists and creative producers to collaborate, innovate, and produce new works. This environment will foster a continuous flow of creative output, enriching Gotham's cultural landscape and attracting both local and international attention to rejuvenate Gotham's cultural legacy and creative economy.
